From the Editors

Just beyond the entrance lies the curved bar, a fine spot for sipping a Chilean malbec or an ambrosial cocktail, like the Peruvian pisco sour. In the dining room, dark wood and leather booths are balanced by bright naperly and creamy white walls, accented with spot-illuminated geometric ceramics and vivid silk-screens in the alcove primarily used for private functions. Sup at the chef's table to fully appreciate the kitchen "ballet."

Emmanuel Piqueras's notable career has flung him from Lima, to Spain, to Portland, to the shores of Lake Washington, where he marries European technique with traditional Peruvian flavors and ingredients to create art of an ephemeral, highly delectable nature: "Novoandina" (New Andean) cuisine. This exuberant erstwhile surfer is now devoted to pleasing palates instead of catching waves, his love of the ocean translating fluidly to a passion for its bounty. Seafood stars on the long menu of "mixturas" -- in tapas and appetizer sizes -- which includes such delicacies as beef heart skewers with crispy fried yucca and a Japanese-inspired ceviche. On the shorter entree list, duck confit, foie gras, and breast tastily coexist on the same plate. In name alone, the hot molten chocolate cake with cool passion fruit "ecstasy" holds tantalizing promise. -- Ginny Morey
